Lawrence Ericsson : Boys in the Wilderness before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Boys in the Wilderness:

This is a light-hearted, oftentimes humorous commentary about men and boys on a wilderness canoe trip. With many intriguing photos and text it shares personal glimpses into the interaction that unfolds between fellow companions as they encounter the vagaries of Mother Nature and act like boys. They laugh. They tease. They grunt and complain. They carry knives and they behave in ways not always appreciated back home. In 1980, the comedic film titled "The Gods Must be Crazy" presented a satirical comparison of contemporary values with more primitive values by bringing together a culture of people who lived a life of interaction with the natural environment and a culture who did not. The intent of this entertaining little book is to share yet another low budget venture into the arena of human values and relationships as unfolded by the author's own introduction and journeys into one of the diminishing wilderness regions still remaining in the United States; the Boundary Waters Canoe Area in northern Minnesota and southern Canada. There may be some casual social commentary but there are no claims of authority or righteousness in the book. There are only claims of fun and a little distrust of Mother Nature. She's sneaky.

About the Author Larry lives in Iowa with his wife of 40+ years. They have two sons. He's an architect by day and a writer by night. This is his first book about his early exploits into the wilderness regions, specifically his first with his two boys when they were young teenagers. Writing is a hobby and one of his passions that he has decided to take to this next level. He claims to not be a "wordsmith". He tries to write as he talks.
