Here I am, a mother of three, in my late, late 40's knocking on the door of 50, doing what most moms do--laundry, dishes, juggling school, job, and cleaning. The older I get, the more I realize that my dysfunctional family is more of the normal life, than what I had always dreamed was normal. So how do moms deal with life in general? We just keep living one day at a time, focus on what is important for the moment, and realize that our children grow up way too fast.

About the AuthorBeverly Weber grew up in Dodge City, KS as one of four girls. Her family was involved in farming in rural Gray County. Her many wonderful memories of the farm and family helped her develop a love for animals and country life. Erma Bombeck's column was a favorite and influenced Beverly's writing style. A teacher, Mrs. Weber feels blessed with great students who enrich her life and strengthen her belief that there are a lot of great kids in the world. The wisdom of age gives her an appreciation for family parents, grandparents and good health. "Time waits for no one" and "tomorrow is a new day" are two sayings she has learned to appreciate in the true impact they have on her daily life.
