Have you ever watched a poorly-executed football game or some other exhibition of masculine strength and skill gone awry and thought to yourself-- "A bunch of little old ladies could have done a better job!""? Clarence Wall has the kind of wayward mind that can pick up that fumbled thought and run it down the field nto a whole gameful of entertaining events. Thus was born MamaSquad! Did you ever wonder what might happen if a group of cantankerous old ladies got tangled up in a special forces mission? Read this hilarious novel to find out.

About the AuthorClarence Wall drew on his eclectic background for feasible twists. He is the right person to have written this adventure. After years of practical enlightenment in the military, mostly in Army Intelligence and as a technical writer, he further tuned his understanding through activities as a stand-up comedian and church choir member (usually not at the same time). Clarence married wife Virginia (Ginny) in 1980, and enjoys life in Escondido, California with daughter Miranda (Mandy), 16, son Jason, 13, two dogs, Samson Maximillian (Max), two Cats, Miss Tabby Angel Pus.
