Another great display of the wit and wisdom of Ilana Lehmann. A really good and very funny read.

Academia is a world unto itself with its own culture and lexicon. Professors, students, and administrators see the world differently and words take on new meanings depending on the person's role. Here is the first dictionary that defines the jargon of higher education with complete irreverence and a heavy dose of sarcasm.

About the Author
Dr. Lehmann is an author, scholar, consultant, and science fiction nutcase. Dr. Lehmann lives in Vancouver, WA where she is owned by a cat named Hobbes, and a dog named Susie Derkins. She has been teaching since 2006. Currently she teaches research methods online to graduate students where she controls her cheeky sense of humor (most of the time).
