I thought it would give more insight, but I thought the explanations were short and vague. My husband said the one about his ex isn't accurate at all so. . .1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Really neat book~different than other astrology booksBy K. DunnI was very pleased with this book! I thought it was a fresh idea and fun to read. Nice book to add to any collection!1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Wonderful!!!By OliviaThis book both delighted and surprised me.As a word of caution: it must be approached with the idea that you are looking for an explanation of someone you hate and not yourself as this book describes the negative aspects that some people may find it hard to admit to.Other than that, the writing was wonderful, and the humor was a breath of fresh air for astrology. I look forward to many more books from Miss Davis as this book was both well-written and highly accurate. Apparently, she conducted her own research for this book rather than just spitting out the same astrological generalities over and over again like so many other writers do, and that research has made Ex Files extremely accurate and up-to-date. She has succeeded in bringing astrology to today's culture.

"This book has everything you could want and more! Learn what games she likes to play, what her next move will be, how to piss her off, and how your own sign will deal with hers!" -- Northwest Woman, Feb/March 2008 Issue

About the Author: Rowan Davis was born and raised on the West Coast. Hurricane Katrina, a giant leap of boredom, and a sudden rash decision took her east, where she met her husband and stepdaughter. She now lives in the state of Texas, surrounded by horses and cowboy hats. She has studied metaphysical subjects for many years, concentrating on astrology and its connections to psychology. She understands that one of the chief concerns of human life is to study and know oneself, and believes that there are many ways for a person to do this. To know yourself and help others to know and love themselves is the highest achievement a person can attain.

Introduction

Its a universal truth that exes are annoying. However, using the principles of astrology, you can better understand what to expect when getting into a new situation with them. Some are more likely than others to cause problems, and some will do little besides make a minor attempt to regain the interest of their lost partners. Using astrology, you can understand the degree to which a person will go to ruin any new relationship her ex attempts to have, and even to hurt both the ex and his new partner individually. There is one basic interest shared by most exes, despite their astrological sign: the desire for self-preservation, including ones self-esteem, ego, and social standing. A breakup can be hard on both parties, regardless of who actually left whom, and in reality few people remain friends with their ex-lovers. The negative feelings surrounding the division of a union be it marriage, sexual, or romantic are often projected on anyone who causes further friction, especially new romantic interests. This leaves people, who may have had nothing to do with the actual disintegration of the first relationship, dealing with a huge amount of the baggage. Because of the differences between mens and womens thought processes and their socially tuned responses to certain stimuli, many men are not socially savvy enough to help their new girlfriends deal with problems that arise from their old relationships. Astrology can help.

Elemental Tendencies in Relationships

Fire Signs (Aries, Leo, Sagittarius)

Fire signs are most likely to attempt to hurt both their ex and the exs new partner individually. Fire signs are passionate people, whose anger and lust must fully run its course before dissipating. Sagittarius is the calmest of the fire signs and will rarely do anything in public against the new couple, but will use her own intelligence and independence to uproot an opponent while attempting to remain friends with her ex. Leo is the most egotistical of the fire signs, and will be loud and demanding in her newfound lack of influence in her ex-partners life. Aries seeks to regain social standing and personal esteem after a breakup, and will promote herself and her new partner publicly while secretly plotting the demise of her exs new relationship. Hurting her ex in particular is rarely a part of her schemes. In general, fire signs are the most aggressive of the elements in the zodiac. Their presence as an ex can rarely be ignored, though one is always encouraged to try to ignore them anyway. Fire signs demand either submission or dominance from their exes and their exes partners before they themselves are willing to go away.

Earth Signs (Taurus, Virgo, Capricorn)

Earth signs have a tendency to appear to be boring people at first. They are down-to-earth, sensual, traditional, and stuck in their ways. However, they are the most varied individual signs of any of the elemental divisions. Virgo is known for being open to many psychological disorders, Taurus is traditional and very earthy, while Capricorn has a tendency to dig for gold rather than for love. In general, earth signs are static people, and are easy to understand because of their simple desires and dislikes. Capricorn is known for her adherence to socially accepted norms, placing her desire for money and status above any personal need for passion and love. She is most interested in her social position and will attempt to hurt her exes on that field. Taurus is very traditional, but somewhat able to accept new concepts. A lover of beauty and comfort, she is the most likely of the earth signs to make her partner comfortable and then outwardly ignore him after the union has dissolved. Virgo is loud in her hatred of almost everything. She is clingy and emotionally unstable, but will throw away the good with the bad at the end of an affair.

Air Signs (Gemini, Libra, Aquarius)

Air signs are the talkers and thinkers of the zodiac. They deal with philosophies, ideas, and the what-ifs of life. They lack the extremes of the other elements—the passion of the fire signs, the stability of the earth signs, and the emotionality of the water signs—but they combine certain aspects of each in small amounts within their own intellects. After a relationship has ended, air signs generally do little more than spread rumors, as they are rarely very attached to most of their partners. Libra is perhaps the most emotionally driven of the air signs, as moods control much of what she does. She is in love with ideas and concepts, but rarely with actual people. She can admire, appreciate, and enjoy a person, but to love a man is too passionate and unstable and threatens to put her off balance. Aquarius is attached to people through her ego, not her heart, and is likely to seek revenge for any slights done to her years after the insult was given. She is the most aggressive of the air signs, and also tends to be the most disliked, as she does not have the social tact of Libra and Gemini. Gemini is more interested in the challenge of potential relationships than the attempt at cementing any current fling. In the rare case that she is honestly interested in keeping a...(Continues)
