And Lance Loomis is sort-of that type of detective, at least he tries to be. But he gets in some really strange situations that a hard-boiled detective normally wouldn't find himself in - like a dress. Or owning a pig as a pet. Or constantly snacking on junk food. I mean, you gotta love some of Loomis' quotes, "After all, most victims of heinous, senseless disgustingly brutal crimes are killed by loved ones." How many other books tell you how to dismantle the primary shaft of a 1978 Le Car? Or include recipes from the detective's favorite eating spots? Anyway, this book was a lot of fun. I would definitely recommend this book to all who like silliness mixed in with their mysteries.
