Great gift for folks entering their 40'sBy Marco V. RodriguezThis is a funny book for people over the age of 40... Excellent "bathroom" reading material. Most of the jokes made me laugh a lot. The cover might be a little deceiving, but it's the inside that counts.

A HAPPY BIRTHDAY JOKE BOOK FOR SENIORS...ANYBODY THAT HAS REACHED FORTY YEARS OLD, AND CONSIDERS IT A LANDMARK IN THEIR LIFE...STILL HAS A LOT OF LIVING TO DO. THE JOKES ARE ABOUT OLD PEOPLE, FOR OLD PEOPLE AND ALL OF THEIR WONDERFUL FOIBLES. LOTS OF FUN AND A GREAT BIRTHDAY GIFT.

About the Author Ramon Joseph Rivas (aka Ray Rivas) was born to a Spanish American family in Newark, New Jersey. His talent for drawing and painting started in kindergarten and carried him until he won a scholarship to an Arts High School. After the US Navy, Ray went to university winning a Bachelor's degree in Biochemistry, then a Master's in Ed. Psychology, then another for Animal Physiology from the Universidad de Madrid. Upon returning from Europe he took a job writing game show questions for the show Jeopardy. Merv Griffin put him in charge of running a small film company in New York City, which led to his first directorial contract in Hollywood, where he learned the craft of directing motion pictures. From directing TV commercials, to educational films, videos, infomercials, and finally his first feature film, in Spanish and filmed in Spain – the script taken from a short story that Ray wrote when he was living in Madrid. When asked how he could switch from Physiology to Filmmaking, he replied, “Simple, they both deal with the human condition, both are very analytical, and both keep our hearts beating at a fairly rapid pace.” “I believe that any healthy, young man or woman, with reasonable intelligent can find a career in the Motion Picture Industry. That's why today I dedicate my career to giving seminars at Universities, Film Schools, Acting schools to motivate people to find themselves in the movie business.” As a raconteur, Ray was advised that he should begin to write novels and as John Grissom does with Law, and Michael Crichton did with science, he choose to write novels about what he knew best – The Motion Picture Industry. Most all of his books are based on real events and fictionalized for reasons that become obvious. Mr. Rivas has filmed in every major film center in the Western world, from London to Paris, Hollywood to Hawaii, and Rio to Rome, Madrid to Mexico where he currently lives with his wife Elsa.
